

Thread ID: thread_DK8cYN5D5vyru0019wGZRdSU

Created at: 11 July 2025, 10:40:21

User (10:40:55):

Can you find a source that focuses on unemployment in the 1930s

Assistant (10:40:58):

I found several sources that discuss unemployment in the 1930s. Here are a few notable excerpts:

Distribution of Unemployment: A report from the Pilgrim Trust outlines the regional distribution of unemployment in Britain from 1929 to 1936, detailing the incidence of unemployment by county^{■4:2source■}.

Lloyd-George on Unemployment: An extract from a report by former Prime Minister David Lloyd George in 1935 discusses the decline of shipping and its adverse effects on general industry and national prosperity, emphasizing the link between international trade and unemployment^{■4:7source■}.

Economic Problems from Abroad: A broadcast by Herbert Morrison, Minister of Transport, in January 1931 highlights various industries affected by unemployment and the government's efforts to address these issues through agricultural bills and housing acts^{■4:19source■}.

These documents provide a comprehensive view of the unemployment situation during the 1930s, reflecting on both the economic conditions and governmental responses.

User (10:41:27):

Can you tell me the document numbers of these sources

Assistant (10:41:29):

Here are the document numbers for the sources discussing unemployment in the 1930s:

Distribution of Unemployment: Document number 2^{■4:2source■}.

Lloyd-George on Unemployment: Document number 7^{■4:7source■}.

Economic Problems from Abroad: Document number 19^{■4:19source■}.

If you need more details from any specific document, let me know!
